Fourth of July Visiting.

Norway Citizens who Spent the Fourth in Other Places, and Friends who Visited Norway that Day.

Independence Day coming Saturday, allowing a rest of two days, many of our citizens took advantage of the opportunity to visit in other towns. Many went to Portland for the day to witness the celebration there which did not come up to the least expectation that those who went to see it had. Others went to other places and enjoyed themselves in various ways. A few of the visitors who came to town and those who went away were:

Alfred Lafertier spent July 4th at Brunswick.

Volunteers Win the Tournament.

Some Good Ball Playing at the Fair Grounds, the Fourth, and Some Not So Good—A Fair Sized Attendance.

At the tournament, Saturday July 4th, the drawing resulted in Harrison and Athletics for the morning game, and Norway and Oxfords for the first afternoon game.

The Harrison-Athletics game was one-sided from the beginning, Harrison being totally outclassed. Tainter of Disfield pitched the innings for the team, but was not in good form and was poorly supported. Foster succeeded him and was steady, keeping the Athletics down to 2 more. Suttan for the Athletics had fine control and had great support. In the last inning Harrison got one run. Score: Athletics, 13;
Harrison, 1.

The afternoon games were close and interesting. The Norway-Oxford game began at 1 o'clock and was evenly contested. Stone and Carrigan were both hit some but good fielding saved them.
At the end of the fifth inning, with the score in favor of Norway 5 to 2, Oxfords objected to the umpire's decision, forfeited the game to Norway.

The final game was the best of the day, and one of the best ever played on the grounds. Suttan pitched for the Athletics and had perfect control. Kelley who was in the box for Norway was not hit badly but gave several bases on balls. Vendette was fine behind the bat, and threw to the bases well. The victory finally went to the Athletics, for the score was 5 to Norway's 3.

making a total abatement amounting to $84.96. The decision was made on June 30.

About ten o'clock Tuesday evening,

ber Selden C. Foster, consisting of Mrs.
Foster and the four children, together with Alice Wise, Mrs. Foster's sister.
The latter put the fire out after hard work, being obliged to carry water

The fire was of incendiary origin, the

There were fewer injuries than last year as a result of the Fourth than last year, son of C. W. Shaw of the Kings district was badly injured about the head by the explosion of a dynamite blast. At first it was thought that the sight of one if not both eyes was likely to be lost but there is hope of saving, it now.
A small hole in the plate glass window of N. Dayton Bolster & Co.'s store was covered the morning of the Fourth. The hole is about the size of a dining needle. Cause unknown.

Epworth League Convention.

The Methodist church, Wednesday and Thursday, has been the mecca of the members of the Epworth League of the Lewiston District, for the convention held here was planned to be a most complete and helpful meeting for the benefit of the organization.

Wednesday, members of the League
from out-of-town, came to the numbers close approximating seventy-five. This with a goodly number of those from South Paris and Norway made the church well filled at the morning and afternoon services of the day, while in the evening the church was crowded to the doors to hear a most inspiring address by Rev. J. W. Magruder on Christian Stewardship.

After formal organization, with the choice of Rev. D. B. Holt of Bath as presiding officer and Rev. Royal A. Rich recently of West Paris as secretary, committees were appointed for the routine business of the session.
All the papers of the day were read either by the ones to whom the program had assigned them, or by others no less qualified to speak, who gave helpful addresses on the spur of the moment.

Especially good was a monthly program for reading by Rev. R. A. Rich, an earnest appeal for use of the best denominational periodicals by Rev. B. F.
Fickett and systematic Bible study by Rev. Hoesa Hewitt. The presiding officer pleaded for an observance of the morning watch, and the papers on the spiritual and uplifting.

Dinner was served in the vestry, and at the close of the evening address a reception was given in the ladies' parlors
when punch was served, and proverbial Methodist sociability enjoyed to the utmost.
To-day's, Thursday's exercises will be of even deeper interest, and more helpful to the convention.

Sunday Service at County Jail.

A service was held Sunday afternoon at the jail by Edwin H. Cotton of Norway, who spoke to those present. Music was by a chorus, and the exercises were both interesting and helpful.

Porter District.

Willard Bryant has been on the sick list a few days.
Mrs. Nellie Porter Fitch of Oskosh, Wisconsin, spent last Saturday night with her uncle, Franklin Porter. She made a very short stay in this state.

It is said that it is not safe to accuse another of intoxication here. July 4, a young man told rather generally that certain other fellows were intoxicated that day. One of the O. F.'s heard of it, and calling out the said Y. M. demanded an account of it. The Diminished Vitality.

Some people talk very flippantly about diminished vitality. They don't stop to think that vitality is the principle of life—that it is that little understood something on which every function of their bodies depends.

Diminished vitality is early indicated by loss of appetite, strength and endurance. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer.

The Sunken Islands.

And a Legend of a Bridgton Lake. Among the legends and traditions with which the state of Maine abounds, is one connected with Highland Lake in the town of Bridgton. There is something sad and tragic in the story and the spot of its origin is given a peculiar interest to all who pass that way.

After the Revolution when the inland towns were being rapidly settled, one of the new comers at Bridgton, a young man of erect and manly bearing, tradition does not tell his name, travelled until he came to Highland Lake. Charmed by the beautiful scenery he resolved to make it his home.

Here for quite a space of time he was the only white man enemy to the fish and game in the region. The pelts of the animals he took to Falmouth where he readily disposed of them.

After being there some time a band of Indians settled on the opposite shore. Then he met his Helen also a Paris.

At dusk his lone figure could be seen standing on the north shore of one of the islands leaning on his paddle. And in her light canoe did Winona come to meet him.

One night Winona was a trifle late or the impatient lover called it so and when she lightly sprang from her canoe to the shore he questioned her, could Sabatis have kept her waiting?

She answered no, for he knew not when nor where she came, but later it will be seen she was mistaken, for the jealous and rejected lover watched her movements closely.

Before she started for her home the white hunter told her he must be gone for four moons but at the end of that time he would return and wait for her as in the past.

"My heart," she said, "goes with you, but I must stay with my father."

So sorrowfully she left him, he standing on the shore watching her out of sight, then turned for home.

Scarcely a rod from shore when an arrow whizzed by his head, then another, which pierced his arm which told him that Sabatis had discovered their trysting place and was seeking his revenge. Taking a round about course in his dug-out, he tried to escape his pursuers but found that he was no match for the light canoe. Not wishing to kill his enemy, but finding that his only way of escape was to disable him, he raised his revolver and aimed at his leg. When the bullet reached its mark, the Indian sprang to his feet, overturning his canoe. The white hunter immediately rescued him from his peril and carried him to his hut, where with care the wound soon healed.

The Indian moved by his kindness said, "Sabatis is sad because he has not the heart of the Indian maiden but it is with the pale face hunter and they shall both be happy together though he never smiles again."

In the morning he told the hunter to go to the pale face village, saying he would go to his people in a few days.

The hunter gladly obeyed and went on his journey.

At the end of the four moons he was back on the island waiting for Winona, but instead Sabatis met him, "How is this?" asked the hunter. "Alas," sadly returned the Indian, "pale face will no more see Indian maiden and no more hear her song. The great Spirit loved Winona better than Sabatis and called her than the white hunter. He has called her home."

He never again left the spot where he and Winona had wandered but lived there until the Great Spirit called him home. Ever after at dusk, his figure was seen leaning heavily on his paddle looking across the lake. In the evening it was there, at dawn it had gone.

Years after a party of settlers visited the spot and found only a beaten path across the island. They rolled a heavy stone into the path and set fire to the rubbish on the island.

Since then the figure has never been seen and now all that remains of the island are a few jagged rocks just showing above the water to show where once stood the lone Sentinel of the Lake.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. It is a curious fact that so many parents, who are ordinarily quite capable of denying requests made by their children, should find themselves compelled to yield when the thing sought for is permission to attend the circus. If one strolls about in any circus gathering one finds scores of men who are there not because they take any interest in the show, but simply that their children may enjoy themselves. Upon no other occasion does the parental heart seem to be more easily moved in the direction of satisfying childish desire. It is a good thing, too, for it would be too bad for the children to be deprived of the pleasure of seeing the circus sights, and it is well for the parents now and then to sacrifice their own inclinations for the welfare of their offspring.

A Wild Ride.

Written for the Advertiser.

By HARRY A. PACKARD.

When the Chicago Western surveyed for their double track system from Chicago to the Pacific coast, they began a long and hard job. Help was scarce, and it was an easy matter for a certain Joe Smith to get a position as an engineer.

Most roads rejected Smith's help, for the fact that he had been discharged from the Y. O. B. road after the express was ditched, caused, as the company said, by "fast running," but really more from a weak track. At any hazard, however, he was careless. Once he had run his snow train too far over the switch and was picked from the rails by the local, and he had "walked the carpet" before the superintendent more than once for going into the roundhouse before the big doors were open. That was a small item, for doors are not expensive, and of far less consequence than to have his train behind time. One thing never could be said of Joe Smith that was blamed on many an older driver, and that was lateness. However, Joe was discharged for good but not daunted in the least, and as I have told you, he went on the C. V.

There was a difference between the small, wheezy engine he had by the name of Baldwins the Y. O. B. owned, but the pay on the western road was even better, and that was what counted.

The road was speedily pushed forward and by July it was half way to the coast. July was a terrible month that year, and it made it hard for Smith in the over-heated C. V. No rain had fallen for months, and the grass was dry as tinder. Drying winds swept over the prairie and the utmost caution of fire had to be used.

On the afternoon following the 4th of July, one of the west-bound trains loaded with ties and lumber was ditched. It was a bad wreck and a huge pile of debris fell across the track. To add to the horror, the stuff caught fire from the over-turned engine.

Smith was sent on a quick trip from Chicago with a load of fire-fighters to keep the flames from the prairie. It was in less than an hour, the trip was made a quick run indeed. The crew on the wrecked train had kept the fire within bounds until the rescuers came up and then by united efforts the fire was put down to a mere mess of coals. However, the cars were so hot that they could not be taken out of the way, and no one knew how many sparks were waiting to be fanned to life in the debris.

BRYANT'S POND.

An Unfortunate Affray.
Sunday morning, an affray occurred in which Deputy Sheriff Wellington Bird and George L. Stephens were concerned. All sorts of rumors are current, and Stephens' friends condemn the officer severely, while Bird's friends say, "Serve him right." As near as can be ascertained, the facts are:
A bill against Stephens was given Bird to collect, whereupon Stephens wrote the lawyer that Bird owed him a larger sum. On the morning in question, Bird meeting Stephens, the amount in dispute proved to be 50 cents, which Bird claimed to have paid. The dispute degenerated into personalities, and culminated in Stephens being knocked down and somewhat injured. The matter has been settled by Bird's paying Stephens a small sum of money.

Schools Set Fire.
Some of the younger scholars playing with matches on Wednesday of last week, it is thought set fire to the grass behind the schoolhouse, causing some very lively work on the part of near by residents to check the spread of fire to the woods. A high wind increased the difficulty of fighting the flames but they were extinguished before dark. The fire was discovered at noon when it gained sufficient headway to make the smoke perceptible.

School closes in No. 8 this week, a week late owing to the illness of the teacher a short time ago, when the school session was interrupted for a week. Miss Cameron has kept a good school, it may be inferred, since there have been no complaints abroad and the attendance has been even. It is hoped that she may come again.

One of the quietest of Fourth's was that of last Saturday, in this section. Not a drum was heard, nor a firecracker's pop in the whole day; no rocket's whizz or serpent's buzz disturbed the calm of the succeeding night. Not in the twenty odd years of the scribe's residence has this occurred before. Is it that the dwellers here are realizing that there will not be income enough from their crops to allow of "money to burn"? There's benediction though in every drop of these most welcome warm rains.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Stevens were guests at Mrs. Stevens' parental home during the Fourth. They returned to their home in Portland, Monday morning.

The Fourth was duly celebrated by nearly all in this section, some attending the base ball game at North Conway, others enjoying the fine ride and beautiful scenery of the Cold River region.

Billy Hutchins, formerly of this place, but now in Chicago, Ill., has been a guest of friends and relatives for the past week. He has been absent nearly four years, and his visit here was greatly appreciated.

HARRISON.

Field Meeting of Mr. Pomological Society.
The Maine Pomological Society held a field meeting at S. H. Daves' Grand View Farm on Thursday, July 2, as per previous announcement. The day was an ideal one and a goodly number of people were present especially in the afternoon.

The forenoon was devoted to an examination of the orchards and fruit gardens of Mr. Daves' farm, the proprietor explaining as far as possible in regard to the different varieties of fruits, the methods of cultivation and the kinds of fertilizers applied.

Although this is an off year in regard to fruit with many farmers, Mr. Daves appears to have a good prospect of having fair crops. His strawberries were not badly killed by frost in the spring, as was the case with many in this vicinity and are yielding fairly good crops.

His currants, gooseberries, blackberries and raspberries give evidence that the harvest will be a large one. His apple crop also promises to be good. Everything gives evidence of thorough and systematic cultivation and weeds are not allowed to grow on this farm.

The visitors were very much interested in what they saw but regretted that they had not come earlier so that more time could have been spent in the field and gardens.

The host had caused a bountiful repast to be spread in the large room on the ground floor of his fruit house and here the officers and members of the society and invited guests to the number of nearly one hundred were fed while very many held a basket picnic on the grounds outside.

After the inner man was fully satisfied Pres. Z. A. Gilbert called the audience to order and after music by Lamb's orchestra, proceeded to the novel meeting saying it was the common custom to teach by word of mouth, but the people had gathered here to learn by observation. He spoke of Mr. Daves as one who had for many years been an earnest worker in the ranks of the society and a very successful exhibition. All are interested in fruit. All like it and are users of it and the only reason why more of it is not used is because there are not more men like Mr. Daves to furnish a first class article. There is as grand a chance in Maine for success in fruit growing as is to be found in any part of the country. Here we have easy access to the best market of the world and there is no danger of the supply ever exceeding the demand.

Mr. Daves made a brief response to Pres. Gilbert and spoke in the highest terms of the society of which he had been a member for 14 years, and said that it had been a great aid to him. This society had done a wonderful work and it had been done without any useless expenditures for balloon ascensions and other shows gotten up simply to catch the people's eye. While other societies had degenerated from their former high standing, this society had taken a higher stand and was striving to elevate its exhibitions.

Hon. D. H. Knowlton, secretary of the society, was the next speaker, and said that this was the first field meeting which had been held by the society and it was so successful that most certainly there would be no fears in regard to trying another in the future.

He complimented Mr. Daves very highly, speaking of his success as an exhibitor at the society's exhibitions and also of the fine farm of which he is the proprietor. He spoke of the beauty of the place and of how nature will work with one who has the ability to work in unison with her. In conclusion Mr. Knowlton read a letter of regret from Mrs. DeOoster of Buckfield spoke of the pleasure that it gave her to see the children on this farm. Farming should hold the children and they should be taught early in life how to set trees and plants and to care for them. They also should receive more agricultural instruction in our schools and the foreigner should never be allowed to run over our farms in the future.

W. O. Breed, proprietor of Hillside Farm, Harrison, was the next speaker, and after some humorous remarks spoke of the great importance of producing first class fruit and packing it honestly.

Other speakers were Rev. E. Z. Whitman, J. Bennett Pike, esq., Hon. C. S. Pope and John W. True of N. Gloucester. Prof. Rane of New Hampshire Experiment station closed the meeting with an elaborate paper on market gardening.

Several others had been booked to speak at this meeting, but the lateness of the hour prevented them from doing so. Lamb's orchestra furnished music for the occasion and Mrs. Cora Dennison gave a solo which was encored. Master Lawrence Dennison gave a recitation, "Apple Picking Time," which was well rendered.

The society passed a vote of thanks to Mr. Daves for the most generous manner in which he had entertained them. Everyone pronounced the meeting a well decided success and all were well pleased with their view of this fruit farm which is the finest in Cumberland county and with the excellent program of exercises which had been provided.

UPTON.

Upton Celebration.
The 4th in Upton passed in a very enjoyable manner, the music of the church bell breaking in on our dreams early, followed by pounding on an old saw, which awoke the echoes, accompanied by the booming of guns, snapping of crackers, and other things that small boys and those not so small delighted in. The display of fanatics, though not large, was good. Quite a few from surrounding towns were with us during the day, and we hope that they enjoyed being with us as well as we enjoyed their being here.

Rev. Mr. Dutton gave a fine address, after which the call to a free dinner for every one sounded. The chase and capture of the greased pig lasted but a few minutes. A. W. A Norway Author.

"Out of Kishineff," by W. C. Stiles, B. D., author of "A Matter of Business," "The Master's Mission," etc. Editor on the Standard Dictionary, Contributor to the International Year Book, etc., has written this book with the assistance and advice of some of the leading literary Jews of America, having been made in the same office where the Jewish Encyclopedia is preparing. The author, however, is a Protestant clergyman, and the book is not in any sense the work of a Jew.

It tells in a most dramatic and interesting fashion the story of the Easter Massacre, recounts the historic sufferings of the Jews, and their persecution by Christians, discusses thoroughly and interestingly the character of the Jews in Russia and in the New York Ghetto, and reviews the question of their immigration to this country. The international relations with Russia are considered, and Russian responsibility for the treatment of Jews is set forth. An addendum of representative opinions from leading American clergymen and publicists is added.

The great interest that Americans are now taking in the Jewish question makes this a most timely book. It is a broad and liberal treatment, that will be very likely to commend itself to all lovers of fair play and humane treatment of the Jews.

Thursday evening, the Oxford Bear hand tub was given a trial on the Bridge street bridge. It was found to be in excellent working order.

It wasn't wash suits but wash pants that were 20 and 25 cents in F. H. Noyes Co's advertisement last week. The Advertiser made the mistake and not the store.

Prof. and Mrs. Herman Stuart have come to Norway to remain through the summer. Prof. Stuart has been re-elected to the principalship of the Mechanic Fall High school.

Fourth of July was a very quiet day in Norway. Even the night before—that the very patriotic usually reserve to make all the noise possible in—was a very small fractional part as noisy as it is wont to be. There were some very good displays of fireworks from different private residences.

Sunday morning at the Universalist church the music was of an exceptionally fine quality. Extra music was by Maude Thompson, soprano; Miss Emerson, soprano; Mr. Bancroft, tenor. Miss Thompson and Mr. Bancroft sang a duet and Miss Emerson a solo. Carl Jean Tolman was organist and accompanist. A large number of people gathered to enjoy the music.

F. W. Faunce and wife and George F. Millett, wife and son spent Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. Millett's brothers in Upper Gloucester. The Fourth was a reunion day of the Faunce family, there being present 26 of the family. Among other interesting things they report seeing at the barn of Mr. Allen an ox girthing 9 feet and weighing 3,500 pounds. The animal is intensely fleshy and is kept as a pet.

Mrs. Walker was a resident of this town for two years until one year ago she moved to South Deerfield, Mass., where she lived about a year. Mrs. Walker will visit relatives in Oxford and Cumberland counties until the last of August, when she will return to Hartford to start her two youngest children, Nathan and Arthur, at school again.

H. J. Morton and wife of Chicago have been in Norway at the Beal's Hotel the past week. They have been at the Lakes for three weeks and have had fine sport fishing. They remembered Landlord Woodman, Editor Sanborn and others with fine lake salmon and trout of their own catching, and Friday these fish were served, cooked in the chef's best manner, to all the guests at the hotel. It has been Mr. and Mrs. Morton's custom to visit Norway once in two years at least for several years. Mr. Morton was a former resident in Norway and has relatives in this vicinity, and they have many acquaintances and friends here.

Norway, the Home of A Well Known Author.

At the name of Sylvanus Cobb many of our older inhabitants will call to mind the time when he lived here in our midst, a genial and kind hearted friend to all. But some of the younger folks, who have read and enjoyed, "The Gunmaker of Moscow," "The Painter of Parma" and other of his stories, may not know that Norway was his home, that in Danforth street, in one of the gable windows, was where he wrote these stories; also that in the house on the corner of Main and Whitman streets other of his stories were written.

He was born at Waterville and always had a great love for the state of Maine. His story was a boy he spent his vacations in Norway and afterwards chose it for his home. He served on the school board, was chief of the fire department and for five years was Master of Oxford Lodge of Masons.

His study chair was in the possession of one of our citizens, as was his desk until the time of our late fire. Everything relating to him is highly prized by his many friends.

At one time he tried farming and bought a place on the Waterville road that has always been known as Yaggar. His idea of farming was more fancy than expensive than profitable, so finally he gave up the project.

Sylvanus Cobb's father was born in Norway and brought up in the Calvinistic school but afterward became a "The Universalist minister and editor of the Christian Freeman." In the office of this paper, Sylvanus learned the printer's trade and was always proud to call himself a printer.

In 1841, he shipped in the U. S. navy and went to the Mediterranean in the frigate Brandywine. In a few months he was transferred to the sloop Fairfield and in this ship visited every place of note on the coast of Europe. No doubt this gave him material for his many tales of adventure.

It is a well known fact that the writing of Sylvanus Cobb made the success of the New York Ledger.

His stories are many, covering as many subjects. A friend who knows him well has said, "It would be difficult, perhaps impossible to learn of one unkind word ever spoken by him."

He died at Hyde Park, July 20, 1887, and his funeral from that place was one of the most impressive ever known.

He was a subscriber to the Norway ADVERTISER as long as he lived.

Killed in Woods.

Buckfield Man Struck Down While Felling

Charles H. Verrill, aged 43, a farmer residing in the mountain district in this town, was found dead in the woods Thursday evening. He had gone in the morning to cut pulp wood in a wood lot about two miles from his home. His failure to return at night caused search to be made, and his body was found about 8 o'clock near the spot where he had been working.

A small wound resembling a bullet wound was found on one side of his head and a large contusion on top, and a small dead tree-top was nearby.

It is presumed that in the high wind which prevailed he was struck on the head by the dead tree-top, knocked down, and the wound on the side of his head, which undoubtedly caused death, was made by some sharp stick or stone as he fell, and that he moved to the spot where his death occurred.

It is thought that the accident may have occurred early in the day, as he had felled only one small tree. He leaves a wife and one child.

NORTH LOVELL.

Died From Being Scalded.

After nearly thirty hours of terrible suffering, little Pearl Butters, who was so badly scalded June 27, passed away. It is a severe trial to the father and mother, as she was a lovely and loving child, and her death was so sudden and came in such a terrible way. Fred Bartlett of East Stoneham conducted the funeral and J. A. Grindell of Lovell Center spoke comforting words to the bereaved friends, and there was some beautiful music by the Christians' Church choir of Lovell Center. There were quantities of lovely flowers, a pillow with Pearl on it, a pansy cross, and a calla with a single blossom and a half blown rose and bud in the little waxen hands. The little casket was set in a bower of beautiful flowers, but none of them so sweet as the little form that the casket contained. The little one will be sadly missed in this place, as the little birdlike voice always greeted every one that passed when she was out doors at play.

Joseph Jordan is visiting his mother, Mrs. Marshall Evans.

The Sabbath school in this place have some new books for their library.

Mr. and Mrs. Parley McKen had green peas and lettuce from their garden, July 5.

Will Stone and wife of Norway and A. N. McAllister and wife of Bethel were here to attend the funeral of their sister Lottie Butler's child, last Tuesday.

School closed here, June 25. It was a successful term taught by Olive Benton of Lovell. Every one liked her, and that is very high praise for a teacher.

The glorious Fourth passed off very quietly here. There was a dance at the hall and a baked bean and pastry supper served by the ladies circle on E. O. McAllister's lawn near the hall. It was an elegant repast and did great credit to the fine cooks who belong to the circle.

The coffee and lemonade were fine and the fruit and candies fresh. Every one was good natured and obliging, and altogether it was a first-class time, and last but by no means least was the very fine music furnished by Andrews of Watford and H. A. McKen of Stoneham.

The Maine-bound trains and boats are more and more heavily loaded every day.

The eagle has screamed once more. The glorious Fourth of 1903 is a thing of the past.

Under the law of 1895 the state gives to a town 10 per cent of what the town raises for the support of its library. Andover raised $125, stipend $12.50; Hiram $50, $5; Oxford, $40, $4.

Anna Livermore Hamlin.

On historic Paris Hill, to-day, many aged residents remember Nancy "Livermore" as she was called in her girlhood days, not because she was the mother of our Vice President, Hannibal Hamlin, but because of her own true qualities of heart and mind.

No matter what the world knows or does not know about her, those who knew her best, have only golden words to drop on the grave on the hill, where she was known and loved the best.

It was an honorable strain that came to Hannah Hamlin from the maternal side of the family.

Anna Livermore was the daughter of Deacon Elijah Livermore, who was the first settler of the town of Livermore, She, as all of her brothers and sisters, were born in Waltham, Mass. He moved to Livermore, named in his honor, after his arrival in that wilderness in 1770 and died there August 5, 1808. When he died he was mourned as a good and honest friend.

Anna was the 6th child and the date of her birth was April 6, 1775.

It was in her early days that she learned the comforts of pioneer life that Anna grew to womanhood. One of the tragic events which marked her girlhood, and which she often vividly described, was the lonely death of Maj. Thomas Fish, a Revolutionary soldier, who lived in their family.

It was at her father's death that she learned to walk from Winthrop over a winter day in 1783, but losing his way in a driving storm, wandered into a swamp when barely a mile from home, and night coming on, hung his pack on a dead limb and died in the snow. The body was found three days afterwards.

Although in these early days facilities for education in books were far different from to-day, those who remember Mrs. Hamlin, say that her language was very accurate, she could write a good hand and spell correctly, when spelling was not the art it is in modern times.

Although in these early days facilities for education in books were far different from to-day, those who remember Mrs. Hamlin, say that her language was very accurate, she could write a good hand and spell correctly, when spelling was not the art it is in modern times.

When Anna was about twenty, the town fathers decided that a doctor was needed in the community. Two leading candidates presented themselves, one, Dr. Cyrus Hamlin of Harvard, the other one is not now known. The majority favored Dr. Hamlin, but Dea. Livermore favored the other. However, Dr. Hamlin came, and got even with Dea. Livermore by marrying his black eyed daughter, Anna. The date of the marriage was Dec. 4, 1797. Until 1806 they lived in Livermore.

When the county of Oxford was organized, Dr. Hamlin was appointed clerk of its courts, and his duties required him to move to Paris Hill, his shire town.

The Hamlin residence stands on the lofty brow of Paris Hill, although of course it has been much changed by renovation. It was built in 1807.

The court sessions were marked events on the "Hill" and young Hannibal with his brothers and sisters were brought in touch with the notables for many miles around.

Mrs. Hamlin was a charming hostess, an interesting conversationalist, above all she was a devoted mother. Twelve children were born of the marriage, six of whom survived infancy. These were Cyrus, Eliza, Anna, Vesta, Hannibal and Hannah.

Dr. Hamlin died Feb. 2, 1820. The widow survived him many years, dying Aug. 25, 1839.

His son Hannibal remained with her up to the time of his marriage, and until his death was a frequent visitor at the old home.

There is no tragedy, no calamity, no bitter adversity in her life, yet her life is a striking one, for she won the general love and esteem and grateful remembrance of all who were so closely intimate with her life.

She bore and trained and counseled a man who was a credit to the nation and the State that claimed him.

TRUE PREVENTIVE OF HAY FEVER.

Hymel Destroys Germs of the Disease and Keeps People Well.

There can be little or no doubt as to hay fever being a germ disease. It is, too, one disease where prevention is much easier than cure.

All who are subject to this disagreeable trouble, should use Hymel daily for at least two or three weeks before the time of their annual attack. In this way the annoying paroxysms of sneezing, running at the nose and watery and smarting eyes can be avoided.

This remarkable discovery makes it possible for anyone to breathe air at home which is almost identical with that of the Adirondacks or White Mountains or other resorts where hay fever sufferers go to escape their trouble.

If, however, Hymel has not been used until the disease has begun, it is necessary to use it more frequently, at least half a dozen times daily, and Hymel Balm should be rubbed into the nostrils both morning and night. This treatment will relieve at once and will effect a cure in nearly every case.

Frank Kimball has complete line of the Hymel goods and will sell an outfit of inhaler, Hymel and medicine dropper for $1.00 and will also agree to refund the money if the treatment does not give satisfaction.

Do not try to cure hay fever by dosing the stomach. Breathe Hymel and in that way the medication will reach the minute air cells in the nose, throat and lungs, soothe and heal the irritated mucous membrane, and prevent and cure all hay fever troubles.

One Hit.

A certain Bill from our high school, More for his ready wit, Was placed upon the base ball team— But Billy never hit. He graduated with our class, Then into society lit; Intent on being one big star— But never made his hit. And so through life His success was always nit, Because of this little fact— Billy could not hit. Then Billy went to war, Did with the soldiers all, But when they fired at the enemy Billy failed to hit. A plauding bullet whistled by, In Bill's neck it made a slit, Thus this single shot made up For the times Billy did not hit.

MARKET GARDENING.

Conditions of a Successful Change From Farm to Garden Crops.

Not all farmers who begin market gardening make a success of their business. Most of them find that their land, while able to produce ordinary farm crops, needs much higher manuring to enable it to produce garden vegetables. The farmer who each spring draws several loads of his richest manure to fertilize his garden may perhaps appreciate why this is so, says The American Cultivator in a consideration of market gardening as a business for farmers dissatisfied with present conditions and methods of cropping. That journal further says:

But it needs much more than soil fertility to enable a farmer to change from farm crops to garden crops. The latter require for cultivation so much more labor that probably when this is fully recognized the man who has begun gardening will abandon the business as unprofitable or be strongly tempted to do so.

To make half of a 50 acre farm into a garden or small fruit growing place will probably require 20 to 50 times as much labor as was required while the same land was devoted to farming crops.

This great increase of the labor bill is sure to frighten the beginner in gardening, and if he is not provided with a reserve of ready money to pay help before the returns come in from products sold it will probably swamp him. There have been many failures in making the change from farming to gardening from this cause, more perhaps than from any other. Yet the fact that successful gardening is thus limited to the small class who have enough capital to be able to pay out large sums before they receive any returns is what makes it profitable. It is the kind of garden vegetables that are most easily grown, and that demand the least expenditure of money, that are constantly growing most profitable as increasing numbers of farmers are finding it possible to grow them.

Nearness to a market where at least a part of the garden products may be sold at retail is an important factor in making the change from farming to gardening. It is always well for the gardener and fruit grower to have a nearby market where he can retail some part of his product, and thus make sure of something. For this reason such a change from farming crops to market gardening can be made more successfully in the New England states, and especially in Massachusetts, than in any other. Nowhere else can the conditions of plentiful supply of labor and nearness to good markets be so certainly secured as they can be here. With regard to overstocking the market, if too many engage in market gardening we believe that the demand is likely to increase quite as fast as the supply.

Ground For Strawberries.

Nothing will fit a piece of ground so nicely for planting with strawberries as cropping for a year or two with onions, carrots or other close planted vegetables which need high manuring and thorough cultivation, leaving the land in a high state of fertility, and reasonably free from weeds, says a writer in The Country Gentleman. My practice, if I do not have such a piece, is to apply well rotted manure, or better yet, composted manure, if I have it, at the rate of 20 to 25 good loads per acre, scattering it evenly. Do not apply any coarse straw to be turned under, as it will keep the water from the subsoil rising to the surface by capillarity, especially if it is turned under in a mass.

If the plowing was not done in the fall, it should be done in the spring as early as the ground can be worked, and rolled, to press the loose soil firmly down on the under soil, in order that the upward movement of the water may not be checked. The dragging can hardly be too thorough. Go over the piece several times until thoroughly pulverized. Harrow well and roll again. Follow by a smoothing harrow that will leave surface fine and not run too deep. Use roller the last time. The nearer the work is finished to time of setting the better.

Cheap Boxes For Tomato Plants.

For transplanting seedling tomatoes many persons now use the cheap plant boxes, 6 by 6 by 5 inches, in the greenhouse, rather than to transfer to a cold frame. In putting the plants in the boxes one man fills each box about half full of a compost made up preferably of an even mixture of horse and cow manure, to which is added for each ton an equivalent of from 20 to 25 pounds of nitrogen in the form of dried blood, tankage or cottonseed meal, and then passes the box to another man, who fills the remaining space with any good soil—that from the bench in the greenhouse is answered for the purpose—and the box is then placed upon the bench in the greenhouse. From this time on the plants should be well watered and the temperature kept at from 60 degrees to 75 degrees F. in the daytime and not lower than 50 degrees at night, with proper ventilation as needed. If these conditions are carefully complied with, the plants will be strong and healthy.

Spring Wheats.

In tests of 48 varieties of spring wheat at the Ontario experimental farms Bart Tremenia, Wild Goose, Mac deah, Sorentina and Algiers were the most productive of the coarse grained wheats and Herison Bearded, Saxonska, Konisburg, Red Fern, Red Fife, Colorado, Rio Grande, Washington, Wellman Fife and Blue Democrat among the fine grained varieties. Herison Bearded in nine years' trials has given an average yield of 26.5 bushels per acre at an average weight of 62 1-8 pounds per measured bushel. In general broadcasting gave better results than drilling. The first seeding of wheat, made April 19, gave a better yield than the later ones. As the time of seeding advanced the crop decreased in quantity and quality.

SOUTH PARIS.

Independent Seizure.

Nathaniel Cook was arrested Sunday evening for stealing 15 gallons of whiskey from his brother-in-law, by Deputy Sheriff Tucker, here.

Cook, who is blacksmith in the Barrows shop on Main street, went to Lewiston to celebrate the Fourth. With him went his wife and daughter. After seeing all that he wanted to, he started to return. Finding his wife and daughter alone at the house, he hurried them into the team, put the keg into the back of the wagon and drove off.

His brother-in-law got out a warrant and when Cook got home he was pinched. He claims not to know anything about the whiskey, and explains the delapidated condition of the wagon by an accident caused by fire crackers scaring the horse, and that he drove back to the city leaving his wife at home.

INCUBATORS VERSUS HENS.

Reasons Why the Former Are Better For Hatching Purposes.

The day is past when the extensive poultryman tries to hatch with hens, as the way is entirely too slow. By the old way when he wanted to set 100 or 200 eggs, as the case might be, he had to find nine or eighteen broody hens, and as many separate nests. Then they must each be tested with artificial eggs to see if they all really were in earnest, and this took nearly a week, and consequently this much time was lost.

The incubator saves this time, and one will do the work of all these hens. Then after the hens were set they must be fed and watered daily and let out for exercise for at least fifteen or twenty minutes, and then their keeper must see that each one gets on her own nest. This must be done daily for about twenty-six days, including the test days, and yet I have said nothing about dusting for lice and the washing of some of the eggs which are sure to become dirty and the repairing of nests as a further result.

If all hens would behave just alike, the task would not be quite so hard, but they will not, as some are over-anxious and continually fuss and turn their eggs and break them in their efforts to do well, no matter what kind of nest they have. The incubator is not subject to this falling, but stays quietly in its place, and no broken eggs or crushed chicks are found. The best incubators require but five or ten minutes' attention daily and can be kept in a room of the dwelling or outsheds near by and can be looked after very easily, while a sitting hen is such a disagreeable thing that she is best kept at a distance. The incubator has another strong point in its favor from the fact that it is willing to sit when wanted, and this is a matter of no small note, as the chick that is ready for sale when broiler prices are highest is the money maker of the market chickens, while the early pullet is the winter egg producer and prize taker at the fair in the fall.

Of a certainty if you use incubators as hutchers you must use brooders as mothers, and this leaves the hens entirely free to do their best instead of running and eating with chicks and laying up fat which ought to go toward filling the egg basket. Chickens raised by artificial means escape the chance of being filled with lice before they are fairly out of the shell and being trampled to death by the mother hen and living in dirty quarters, for one hen will make more dirt in a day than twenty-five young chicks.—F. Baugie in American Poultry Journal.

A Useful Alarm Clock.

Walter Bernard has secured a small tract of land a few miles east of Olympia, Ore., and stocked the place with a few dozen chickens. As he is compelled to be away from his home during the day he studied out a scheme for caring for his chickens during his absence.

In each yard he had erected troughs to hold food for the hens, and these troughs are connected by wire with his house. Within the house Mr. Bernard has connected the wire with an alarm clock with the usual battery attachment.

When he leaves home in the morning he sets the alarm clock at the hour for feeding the chickens and by an ingenious arrangement when the time arrives the alarm goes off, the connecting wire releases the troughs and the chickens make a rush for their food, which is spread before them as if Mr. Bernard did the job in person.

Curing Colds.

Each fowl showing evidence of cold or congestion is shut up in a small coop and given two grains of Elymnia, Ore., and stocked the place with a few dozen chickens. As he is compelled to be away from his home during the day he studied out a scheme for caring for his chickens during his absence.
